CHIEF JUSTICE FULLER ONE OF THE DEFENDANTS.

He's Brought in as Chancellor of the Smithsonian Institution, Which Claims Residuary Estate, New Amountto More Than $1,500,000

Gamaliel C. St. John, executor of the estate of Wallace C. Andrews, through James W. Hawes, his attorney, brought suit in the Supreme Court of this county vesterday against the Andrews Institute for Girls of Willoughby, Ohio, a suburb of Cleveland, the Smithsonian Institution, Chief Justice Fuller of the United States Suprama Court and John Cunneen, Attorney-General of the State of New York, to obtain a judicial construction of the will of Wallace C. Andrews.

Wallace C. Andrews was one of the original Standard Oil men, and at the time of his death was president of the New York Steam Company. He and his wife were willed on April 7, 1899, in a fire in their home at Sixty-eeventh street and Fifth avenue. his sister-in-law, Mrs. St. John, the wife of Gamaliel C. St. John, the plaintiff in this suit, and all the St. John children, nore also killed in the fire.

Mr. Andrews's will left a life estate in all his property to his wife, gave a half million dollars to different sisters and brothers to be distributed after the death of his lot wife, and then left the balance to a corporation to be formed under the laws of Ohio by his executors, who were his wife and her brother, Mr. St. John, during the life of brother, Mr. St. John, during the life of the "longest liver," for the purpose of establishing on the farm in the town of Willoughby, Ohio, where Mr. Andrews had resided, a school for the free education of girls between 10 and 16 years of age.

The will also provided that the charter of the corporation to be formed should, in so far as consistent with the law, provide for a board of directors to consist of the Governor of the State of Ohio, the Member of Congress from the Willoughby district, the Treasurer of Lake county, in which Willoughby is situated; the Mayor of Will-Willoughby is situated; the Mayor of Willoughby and Mr. St. John.

Mr. St. John caused a corporation to be formed under the lews of Ohio under the name of the Andrews Institute for Girls. The present directors are Gov. Nash, Congressman Beidler, Mayor Collister and the other official referred to in the will, as well as Mr. St. John himself. The estate is worth much more than a million and a half of dollars over and above the half million dollars gifts to sisters and brothers of Mr. Andrews.

The will provides that in case the gift to be Ohio institution should, because of illegality, fail or become impossible realization, the sum intended for it should go to the Smithsonian Institution at Washington. Under the act of Congress under which the Smithsonian Institution was formed the Chief Justice of the United States is the chancellor of the institution.

There being some question as to whether or not, under the act of Congress, the Smithsonian Institution is a corporation it was deemed necessary to make Chief Justice Fuller a defendant in the suit. This is said to be the first time a Chief Justice lass awar been made a defendant.

is said to be the first time a Chief Justice has ever been made a defendant.

Henry Wollman of this city and Virgil P. Kline of Cleveland, counsel for the Andrews Institute for Girls, have, on behalf of the Ohio institution, demanded of the executor all the money and property in his hands. The Smithsonian Institution, which is represented by Frank W. Hackett of Washington and Wetmore & Jenner of this city, denies the validity of the gift.

The executor, in order to have the matter The executor, in order to have the matter finally and effectually settled, brought the suit against all the parties to obtain a judicial construction of the will.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., May 19 .- This morning a house in Front street, facing Staten Island Sound, was raided and over $2,000 worth of thieves' plunder was taken to police headquarters. A sloop without a name sailed into this harbor about a week ago, and for the next night or two persons living near the shore missed various things. Stories of robberies came from Totte wille and various other places on the bays and the Sound. New York harbor police came here and boarded the sloop about 11 o'clock at night. They landed here they were arrested. They are now in jail awaiting extradition papers. They may be taken to New York to be tried.

The sloop has been claimed by a member of the Stuyvesant Club of Port Morris. It had on board much silverware.

This morning Chief of Police Burke received a letter from Mrs. M. B. Burger of Saynort Point Connections. Sayport Point, Conn., stating that many robberies have taken place in towns along the Connecticut River and that she was one of the victims She asked if any of the "B." No silver so marked was found, but it happened that just at this time the Front street house, which had been watched by the police for some time, was raided and not only was much silverware marked "B" found, but also large quantities of other silver, beautiful clocks a d ladies' dresses

Jewelry was also found. One of the pieces now in possession of the police is a silver bottle marked "Active, N. Y. A. C." evidently from a yacht of that name.

The house where the goods were found was occupied by two well-known characters about here known as Ann Jane McBride and Mary Ann Togg. They have both been missing since the sloop's crew was arrested.

FIREMAN SWEENEY LOSES.

His Working Day Need Not Be Limited to Eight Hours.

ALBANY, May 19 .- The Court of Appeals to-day affirmed with costs the orders of the lower courts in the case of the People ex rel. Thomas Sweeney vs. Fire Commissi ner Sturgis of New York city.

Sweeney was defeated in the lower courts in a proceeding undertaken to secure a peremptory mandamus to compel the Fire Commissioner to limit his working day to eight hours. He is a driver in the Fire De-partment and alleged that he has to be on duty twenty hours out of every twentyfour, in volation of the Labor law, which limits hours of city employees to eight.

It was contended in his behalf that the Fire Commissioner had abundant power to employ as many drivers as processary. to employ as many drivers as necessary; that the overworking of Sweeney was cruel and denied his right to ordinary human leisure, besides being inimical to the public

The counsel for Commissioner Sturgis ne counsel for Commissioner Sturgis maintained that the eight-hour provision of the Labor law did not apply to firemen; that they had, in spite of their occasionally arduous labor, long periods of rest and special pension and other privileges.

The Justice called the attention of the jurors to the rumors and, intimating that he thought there was foundation for them, urged the body to seek out the guilty persons and indict them.

When the Grand Jury returned to the inquest chamber Clerk James Clarke was directed to withdraw. He notified the Court and was told that the jurors couldn't keep him out. He was admitted.

Prosecutor Speer refused to discuss Judge Dixon's charge or the nature of the evidence concerning jury fixing which he has accumulated. He admitted that he had considerable information that petty jurers have been tampered with. When the Grand Jury returned to the Good Work Shown in the Annual Exhibition of the Hebrew Technical Institute.

The Hebrew Technical Institute, at 36 Stuyvesant street, held its annual exhibiion of work yesterday afternoon and evening. The institute, which is practically a combination of trade school, manual training school and polytechnic institute, operates four departments: Mechanical, and architectural drawing, electrical construction, pattern making and moulding. The school's course of three years en-ables the students to secure places immedi-ately after they are graduated instead of active after they are graduated instead of serving a long apprenticeship in a factory. The first two years of the course are de-voted to general educational work. In the last year the pupil devotes his time en-tirely to the particular trade he intends to

The exhibits in each department were very complete, covering the work from the beginning of the course. The most in-teresting exhibit was made by the pupils of the pattern making and moulding de-partment. This branch has three sub-divisions, each of which furnished an ex-hibit. The idiracy class showed a complete hibit. The joinery class showed a complete line of furniture. The work of the wood-carving class comprised ornamented fur-niture panels and burnt wood work. Beside the regular petterns the third class ex-hibited models of ancient pottery cut from solid blocks of wood. The graduating class this year has fortyseven members, nearly all of whom have secured places. The commencement ex-ercises will be held in the ball at Cooper

NEW BOOKS.

For Fishers Skilled and Unskilled. With the spell of hot weather reminding is that vacation is at hand comes fittingly a book for the democratic, miscellaneous fisherman in "The American Sportsman's Library," published by Macmillans. Salmon and trout and big fish of various sorts, like tarpon, have had their turn in other volumes; in "Bass, Pike, Perch and Others," Dr. James A. Henshall takes up the vest variety of other fish that the aimless fisherman east of the Rocky Mountains is likely to find at most seasons of the year. It ranges from bass and bluefish and pike and pickerel down to perch and flounder and smelt and cunner. The number of fishes dealt with makes necessary a somewhat more scientific arrangement, according to classes, than in the other volumes, and the number, too, implies brevity in description of the fish and the way to eatch them, and the implements but the author manages to get in a good many fishing stories, and anecdotes, too. If you don't know what fishing you are likely to meet in the course of your vacation, this is the book to take along. It tells of everything the markets or the dinner table ever saw and of much else be-

They See Not, Neither Do They Hear.

The wonders that patience has accom plished for the unfortunates who are deprived of sight and of hearing are best known through the cases of Laura Bridgman and of Helen Keller, but the same work of mercy is being carried on with many others who are similarly afflicted. Mr. William Wade in two beautifully gotten up pamphlets, printed for private circulation, "The Deaf-Blind" and its supplement, "The Blind-Deaf" (Hecker Bros. Indianapolis), has drawn up a sort of census of all the known cases in this country. with a few in England, and has given brief account of what has been done fo

The number of the doubly afflicted though pitifully large, when the individuals are considered, is surprisingly small in proportion to the classes of the cases. There is some discussion of the methods by which the blind and deaf may be taught, the systems of print and so on, and there are many attractive pictures of the patients who are being trained. The pamphlets are interesting records of the brave fight to relieve almost hopeless suffering.

Mud Throwing at Carlyle. It was safe for one long-eared anima o insult the dying lion; it is still safer to do when the lion is dead. Many persons doubtless believe that Thomas Carlyle is overrated, and still more wish that he had written English, as he could, instead of Carlylese, which he generally did write. Compare "John Sterling" with "Frederick the Great." A "biographical" article in the Bookman, with a superfluity of illustrations, has been reprinted in book form and is published as "Thomas Carlyle" by James Pott & Co. The authors of the forty pages. more than half filled with pictures, are G. K. Chesterton and J. E. Hodder Williams The latter we assume wrote the notes. Mr. Chesterton belongs to the school of youthful impertinence which, though we have specimens here in America, seems to thrive best in England. He talks as little of Carlyle as he can, but plunges at once into paradoxes and sputters of feeble wit, like Japanese firecrackers intended to show what a remarkably elever young man Mr. G. K. Chesterton is. He informs us that Carlyle was the great "Irrationalist," calls him "a monster of industry" who "achieved such masterpieces of research as the discovery of sense in Cromwell's speeches and good qualities in Brederick of Prussia." It is hard to believe that Mr. Chesterton has read Carlyle, and even harder to believe

Emerson's Centenary. We owe, no doubt, to the approach of the elebration of Emerson's birth, the many volumes, little and big, that are being published about him now. The veteran F. B. Sanborn, last of the Concord sages publishes "The Personality of Emerson" (Charles E. Goodspeed, Boston). It contains pleasant reminiscences of Concord and Boston and Cambridge and was well worth while. It is otherwise with Mr. Frederick William Holls's little pamphlet "Correspondence Between Ralph Waldo Emerson and Herman Grimm" (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.). A dozen short letters only, including mere notes to introduce William James. Prof W. W. Goodwin, Edward Emerson and others, they show kindly feeling, and two or three might be included in a complete correspondence, but they are too slight to print, save as a curiosity. Mr. Holls's short introduction is interesting #### as showing his own relations with Grimm. The Oldest Laws in the World.

To those who have followed the conroversy ever Prof. Delitzsch's "Bahel' lectures and to all who care for folklore and Biblical study the text of the old Babylonian laws recently discovered will be of interest. A translation by Mr. C. H. W. Johns, lecturer in Assyriology at Cambridge University, is published by T. & T Clark and is printed by Charles Scribner's Sons, with the title "The Oldest Code of Laws in the World. The Code of Laws Promulgated by Hammurabi, King of Babylon, B. C. 2285-2242," It is to be hoped that scholars will agree soon on the spelling of the legislator's name, as we have seen it beginning with an H, a Kh and a K and with variants in the body of the name. Mr. Johns, in a brief introduction, gives an adequate account of the stone on which the code is inscribed, of the manner in which it was discovered and other important matters. Then follows the text. The translation is an independent one. from Father Schiel's text, but some notes of Winckler's German translation are or the solution of the quadrature of the circle the search for the universal language has its victims. The idea that language is a growth obeying natural laws and determined by the survival of the fittest will not enter their heads, and they continue to devise ingenious systems which only require the common agreement of all mankind to become practical. Some years ago we "Erilliant, sophis icated and clear, had Volapük, which was taken up enthusithis novel breathes a fascinating spirit astically by many persons, some of whom, we believe, still continue the cult and publish periodicals in that artificial tongue. Now comes "Esperanto," whose founder is a Dr. Zamendorf, which has been taken up by enthusiasts in France to some "Esperanto. The Student's Complete Text Book," has been compiled by J. C. O'Connor and is published by the Fleming H. Revell Company. A very small volume contains the mighty invention. The language is built with a method and symmetry too beautiful for human frailty, which will break out into irregular verbs and forms that deviate from the rule. These attempts to run counter to nature are harmless enough, but it seems a pitiful waste of time and talents on the part of the inventors. Those who lose time in learning these systems might otherwise, we imagine, be engaged with ping-pong or the fifteen puzzle or with sociology.

Arber's Garner Reprinted.

Two more volumes of the reissue of Prof. Edward Arber's "An English Garner" have come to us from E. P. Dutton & Co. The volumes have been rearranged according to subject matter. We should think that blind and the deaf and dumb. Where the for purposes of reference, the new material material admitted Mr. Wade has been able which has been added might have been to give pretty full accounts of notable marked, if only by asterisks in the tables of contents. We have here a volume of "Critical Essays and Literary Fragments." with an introduction by J. Charton Collins. that ranges from Wilson's "Art of Rhetoric 1554, to Franklin's "Poor Richard Improved." 1757. We have also a volume labelled "Social England Illustrated: A Collection of XVIIth Century Tracts," with an introduction by the ever present Andrew Lang. The series will be completed in twelve volumes, which will be welcomed by scholars who cannot get the original "Garner" now out of print. The price is

MODERN OBSTACLE

ALICE DUER MILLER

THE modern obstacle is, of course, the lack of money. Suppose there is not money enough, according to present day standards, to make a certain love match possible. but the man is certain to die, any way, within a year. Why shouldn't the lovers have this brief interval of married happiness? Afterwards the young widow may do what her station in life demands. The story runs the gamut from lightest comedy to truly tragic situations. There is an epigram or a brilliant generalization in every paragraph.

BUFFALO, May 19 .- The three large missionary bodies of the Baptist churches of the North will work in closer relations the North will work in closer relations with one another as the result of the report; made by the committee of fifteen to the Baptist delegates in this city this afternoon. These three bodies are the American Baptist Missionary Union, which is the foreign mission organization; the American Baptist Home Mission Society and the American Baptist Publication Society, which looks after the printing and distribution of Bibles, tracts, Ac.

These three bodies, with their women's auxiliaries, have complete charge of the missionary work of all the Baptist churches of the North, which have a membership of 1,500,000.

At present, these organizations operate practically independently of one another. Naturally, there has been an overlapping of one another's work, and friction has been caused. report of the committee, made at o-day's session of the delegates, recom-mended systematic ecoperation between the three organizations and the appointment of a committee of nine which shall consider and settle all questions of differences arising among them. Annual conferences are also recommended.
